Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a form of Greek or Latin, covering the left page of the manuscript. The text is dense and appears to be organized into several columns or sections, possibly representing a list or a detailed account. Some words are written in larger, bolder letters, possibly serving as section headers or important terms. The script is highly stylized and difficult to decipher without specialized knowledge of the language and its historical context.

The right page of the manuscript is mostly blank, showing significant signs of age, including yellowing, foxing, and some faint, illegible markings. There are some very faint traces of text or drawings, but they are not clearly legible. The overall appearance is that of an old, well-used document that has been largely left to decay.

[Faint, mostly illegible handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a medieval or early modern manuscript. The text is written in dark ink on aged, yellowish paper. Some words are partially legible, such as "Hic" and "Ite".]
